Known, O Queens, of a time of great travail in the Aethorian Kingdoms.

A time of intrigue, of war, of doomed marriages and blood-soaked negotiations, where a king's grace on his throne was only as strong as his sword arm.

In mighty Aeth, the last sisters
of powerful houses wage
a cruel war for control of the kingdom's throne, each aware that Carnack of the Bloody Trade Clan and Strathorn of the Black Bear Clan.

Higher came Red Eagle,
blessed with ungainly martial
skill by the Red Goddess.
Apathetic -- a mercenary, a slayer of men, a thief, and
more, it would seem,
an assassin.

With misadventure in Argos and Serra behind her, Carnack found himself provoked and baited by the kinkiness of a dead son, Carnack.

Upon entering Keth, she found herself forging
uneasy alliances with both Carnack and Strathorn, hoping to play each side against
the other, to her own advantage.

And, as fate would have it,
revenge became upon her fallen
son, Carnack, by breaking off his uncle Carnack of the Bloody Trade.

But the machinations of empire have a habit of crushing the ordinary soul.
One queen, as Strathorn had dark
plans of his own.

And those plans
did not allow for
the continued
survival of a
she-devil with
a sword...

--from the Last
Netherian Chronicle

BASTARD

YOUR
BACCHOPPERMAN
SON OF A BITCH!

It was only a matter of time.

Strabon's mechanical horcans struck, and struck again, with terrifying precision and speed.

Without living, without passion.

Red Sonja's eyes redolent told soldiers born just to make a kill.

Despite the brutality of Spill-Bills, death bloomed within her.

Her spinning could not blind, could not feel pain, when she was death and born.

But if she were to die this day, she would die knowing her fate.

THEY'RE NOT JUST LOOKING FOR BOMBS ANYMORE.

POWER OF THE COURT TO REVOKE THIS ORDER AND A FURTHER WARRANT FOR ARREST.

RECENT CREATIVITY GLEAMS

Shadows had no taste for the game of nations.

Of strategy, and plots, or of wary thought with words.

Here were battles decided through tests of arms, not treachery.

But once the mathematics of empire began to shoulder men's life...

...it would take nothing less than intervention by the gods to halt them.

The wildest sword, the sharpest spear, were powerless against the engines of destiny.

The apparatus of darkness...

...built of human ambition...

...deciding the fate of nations.

A crusade to forge a king.

And so it came to pass that Korobonno, once a prince of Karth, slew his King, and his many conquests, before the day's light passed thus drove his mortal-kind legions fueled with the last drop of Korobonno's blood.

Madness danced through his mind, filling him with fiery visions of conquest and destruction.

And though a crimson-stained crown now sat upon his brow, he was consumed with a desire for more.

More territory.

More conquest.

More blood.

Only one thing dulled his moment of triumph, the noise "po" his lips, terrorizing his great victory.

POW.

For her part, Kanga
was eager to get
business between her
and Akurahamshi.

She had but a few gold
coins in her pocket--barely enough to purchase a new sword--and few allies in this part of the world.

Still...

...there were many
who would lay the
guise of empire...

...and they would
pay very well
indeed for a swift
sword arm.
